REVIVAL CLOSING SUNDAY

A Convincing Temperance Lecture by Evangelist Barnes at the Opera House Last Sunday.

The Christian Church revival will close next Sunday. In the morning the Evangelist will speak on "Mother, Home and Heaven."

In the afternoon at the Opera House the subject will be "Hell With the Lid Off," and at night "Bidding Good-bye to God." It is hoped everybody will attend these closing services.

The revival meetings under the preaching of Evangelist Barnes at the Christian church will close next Sunday night, as announced above. During the more than three weeks that these meetings have been in progress interest in them has not lagged. Although the outward result in conversions has not been large, only about eight, yet it is generally felt that an undercurrent of good has been started that like a little leaven will spread. A community is always better for such wholesome teachings of Gospel truths.

REM. RUIN AND THE REMEDY.

Sunday afternoon Evangelist E. B. Barnes spoke on "Ruin, Remedy and the Remedy." He said in part:

The liquor traffic is a breeder of crime. It is responsible for nearly all the misdeeds of the country. It is a business concerning which not a good thing can be said. It robs a man of his honor and of his money. It dulls and deadens his conscience.

There are so many phases of the liquor traffic that demand notice, but this one fact only will be mentioned, viz: That the moderate drinker is the worst enemy to the temperance cause. The man who is already down and in the gutter will soon pass beyond human reckoning. He is a bundle of rags. The saloon has done its perfect work on him, and you see a finished product. But the man who takes a glass now and then and keeps steady is an invitation to the unwary to begin, and no penalty will be attached. Let the practice continue and the day soon comes when the victim must give up the drink or his business, and the probabilities are that he will give up the latter. The young stumble over the moderate drinker into the pit, and alas! often, when any of the number are reclaimed, they are but a remnant of their original self. The powers have been dissipated and the best of life burned out in alcoholic fires.

What is the remedy? Total abstinence for all. No compromise with the evil alliances for revenue, or for any cause. Charity for the erring must be shown, for the seller and the buyer, and the Gospel of Christ is the only power to heal, restore and save. We are all partners in the business of making drunkards. Let us wash our hands clear of all it demoralization. We do not agree to wipe out the saloon. We can resolve that if it continues to exist, it does so in spite of our protest.

Kahn, the best photographer that Farmington has ever had, gave out to his patrons recently a little calendar that will be appreciated more probably than anything they have ever received of that character, for on each was an excellent photograph of the household pet, from the large array of baby photographs he has taken. The editor of THE TIMES was the recipient of one of these gems with a life-like picture of his little grandson, Theodore Simmons, peering from the card.
